

...and finally...

Memoirs

Before sending the kids home, you ask them to write a journal about everything that happened in the past week. It turns out that they've already started — because they just signed a book deal to tell their story. Of course.

Looking over some of the colorful mementos they picked up from people they met along the way, the kids contemplate how difficult it's been to do justice to the experience. Really, how can you summarize a tale like theirs?

Received with this puzzle: this page; one lemon (eighteen slices, one sheet).
